It was described by Turner in 1908. It is found in Australia, where it has been recorded from New South Wales and South Australia. The wingspan is about 25 mm. The forewings are dark grey with some fuscous scaling and a blackish streak along the costa, extending to the fold. The hindwings are whitish-grey. References Category: Moths described in 1908 Category: Muscomorphinae Category: Moths of Australia Cardiovascular disease is a leading cause of death in industrialized countries. The major risk factors for cardiovascular disease include high serum cholesterol, hypertension, smoking, obesity, diabetes, lack of exercise, diet, and excessive alcohol consumption. Together these conditions directly affect the blood vessels and result in an increased risk of heart attack, stroke, arteriosclerosis, and peripheral vascular disease. Accordingly, treatment of cardiovascular disease conditions requires a multi-disciplinary approach. For example, the risk factors can be controlled by drugs, lifestyle changes, surgery, or any combination of the foregoing. The statin class of drugs is used to treat high LDL cholesterol. Statin drugs, such as pravastatin, simvastatin, atorvastatin, fluvastatin, rosuvastatin and lovastatin act by inhibiting the enzyme 3-hydroxy-3-methylglutaryl-coenzyme A ("HMG-CoA") reductase, also known as HMG-CoA reductase. HMG-CoA reductase is the rate limiting enzyme in the biosynthesis of cholesterol and other sterols in mammals. Thus, by inhibiting the rate-limiting enzyme in cholesterol biosynthesis, cholesterol
