Hair Loss Information for Women: Over time, external stressors will have an adverse effect on your hair. Stress and depression are two of the most common conditions that can cause hair loss in women. You can count on hair to be an indicator of your overall health; if you notice your hair is thinning, you may want to ask your doctor whether you might be experiencing an underlying condition. There are many issues that may be at play in female hair loss: Hormonal changes - it's not just aging that causes hair to fall out; some women begin to experience hair loss as their levels of estrogen and/or testosterone drop. The amount of hair you lose is not influenced by your actual hormone levels; it is more a function of how much hair you have to start with. Thyroid conditions - women who have a high level of thyroid hormone are often
